THE ‘LAW’ THAT EXPLAINS WHY YOU CAN’T GET ANYTHING DONE

“It is a commonplace observation that work expands so as to fill the time available for its completion.” British historian C. N. Parkinson wrote that opening line for an essay in 1955, (0) __________.

I think about it every time I have a deadline. How long it takes me to write a story (1) __________ when my deadline is and how much time I have until then. In his somewhat satirical essay Parkinson uses the example of an elderly lady writing a postcard to her niece. Since she has nothing else to do with her time, the otherwise simple task takes up her entire day. Parkinson’s original intention, though, was not to take aim at old lady letter-writers, (2) __________: the bureaucratisation of the British Civil Service.

One scholar who has taken a serious look at Parkinson’s Law is Stefan Thurner, a professor at the Medical University of Vienna. Thurner says (3) __________ when the faculty of medicine at the University of Vienna split into its own independent university in 2004. Within a couple of years, he says, the Medical University of Vienna went from being run by 15 people to 100, (4) __________. “I wanted to understand what was going on there, and why my bureaucratic burden did not become lighter; (5) __________,” he says.

Parkinson pointed to two critical elements that lead to bureaucratisation: the tendency of managers to hire two or more subordinates to report to them, and the fact that (6) __________. Companies typically start with a flat hierarchy, perhaps two engineers. As the company grows, they hire assistants, (7) __________ and hire their own subordinates. “A pyramid starts to grow. When the pyramid gets very large and expensive, (8) __________. If the bureaucratic body is not drastically reduced at this stage, the company will die.”

WHY SLEEP SHOULD BE EVERY STUDENT'S PRIORITY
It’s hard to overstate the benefits of a night’s rest for human memory, and neuroscientists are just beginning to understand why.

Jakke Tamminen has plenty of students who do that very studenty thing of staying up all night right before an exam, in the hope of stuffing in as much knowledge as they can. But “that’s the worst thing you can do,” the psychology lecturer at the UK’s Royal Holloway University warns them. He should know. Tamminen is an expert on how sleep affects memory.

In Tamminen’s ongoing research project, participants learn new vocabulary, then stay awake all night. Tamminen compares their memory of those words after a few nights, and then after a week. Even after several nights of recovery sleep, there is a substantial difference in how well they recall those words compared to the control group of participants who didn’t face sleep deprivation.

“Sleep is really a central part of learning,” he says.

Tamminen’s sleep lab is a sparsely decorated room with a bed and a small electroencephalography (EEG) machine and monitor above the bed to detect activity in each research participant’s brain, via electrodes placed on the head. These measure not only activity in different regions of the brain but also eye movement.

In the control room researchers can see in real time which parts of each volunteer’s brain are being activated, for how long, and to what extent. It’s easy to tell when a volunteer is in the rapid eye movement (REM) phase. But more critical to Tamminen’s current research – and to sleep’s role in language development more generally – is a non-REM phase of deep sleep known as slow-wave sleep (SWS). This phase is important for forming and retaining memories, whether of vocabulary, grammar or other knowledge. The interaction of different parts of the brain is key here. During SWS the hippocampus, which is good at quick learning, is in constant communication with the neocortex to consolidate knowledge for long term recall. The neocortex is the part of the brain that is involved in higher-order brain functions. The hippocampus might initially encode a new word learned earlier that day, but to truly consolidate that knowledge, to link new information with existing information, to spot patterns and find connections with other ideas – the neocortical system needs to get involved.

WHERE ARE THE ARCHITECTS WHO WILL PUT THE ENVIRONMENT FIRST?

Nearly 40% of UK greenhouse gas emissions are caused by the built environment, i.e. buildings, roads, parks, etc. This figure suggests that the design of buildings and the planning of cities can do much against climate crisis.

Architects like to think of themselves as public-spirited, well-intentioned people. The profession tends to attract people who want to change the world for the better. And what could matter more than the prevention of environmental and societal collapse? So what would architecture look like if all involved really and truly put climate at the centre of their concerns? Would there be no more concrete, given that the material has been fingered as particularly destructive? Or an end to towers covered with panels that have to be replaced every 30 years?

It is not enough to reduce what are called the “in-use” costs – heating, ventilation, lighting, water, waste, maintenance – but also the “embodied energy” that goes into construction and demolition: producing cement, steel and bricks, transporting materials, putting them in place, taking them down again and getting rid of them. There’s little point in building something that performs magnificently in use if it takes decades or centuries to pay back the cost of energy that went into its construction.

Painful choices may be required. It might mean some genuinely difficult dilemmas: concrete, if used properly, slows the rates at which a building cools down and warms up (good) but is made with cement, a material that single-handedly accounts for about 8% of the world’s carbon dioxide emissions (not good). Sustainable design should ideally help buildings which are all-round better, longer-lasting, more pleasurable, more beautiful.

The architectural profession needs to reconsider its value systems: what is considered good and what bad. Architects are still trained from their student days to perform in a competitive and individualistic profession. They get more glory for designing a singular new building than they would if they worked out a good way of insulating old houses. Yet, as most of the building stock of the future is already with us, and as demolition and rebuilding goes with getting rid of whatever went into making the original building, the latter achievement is likely to be more useful than the former.

(The Guardian)
0) A) Most architects in the UK are deeply concerned about the environment.
   B) If better buildings were built, it could put an end to harmful emissions.
   C) The built environment causes nearly half the harmful emissions in the UK.
   D) In the UK, buildings contain an especially high amount of harmful materials.

16) A) Many architects have strong social values.
    B) Architects tend to think too well of themselves.
    C) Architecture often attracts the wrong kind of people.
    D) Architects can do more for the environment than other professions.

17) A) Many architects do not really care about the environment.
    B) No more tower blocks should be built in the future.
    C) Better panels should be used so they don’t have to be replaced every 30 years.
    D) It is difficult to say how to make architecture environment-friendly.

18) A) Running a house uses up less energy than building it.
    B) Building a house is more harmful to the environment than running it.
    C) Architects need to consider all the energy consumption involved.
    D) It may take a very long time to pay back the cost of building a house.

19) A) As a building material, concrete has both advantages and disadvantages.
    B) Certain kinds of cement are more environment-friendly than cheaper types.
    C) The main problem with concrete is that too much of it is produced.
    D) Sustainable design is regarded an impossible aim to achieve.

20) A) Architects are far too individualistic.
    B) Most architects enjoy competition.
    C) Architects need to get their priorities right.
    D) Students should be taught how to insulate buildings.

21) A) Most of the existing buildings will have to be pulled down in the future.
    B) Designing new buildings brings more prestige than improving old ones.
    C) Making existing buildings more environment-friendly is expensive.
    D) It can cost even more to demolish a building than it originally cost to build it.

22) A) Demolishing old buildings is a good way of protecting the environment.
    B) Reusing materials that went into the construction of a building is costly.
    C) Demolishing an old building is often less expensive than preserving it.
    D) Improving an old building can be a better choice than demolishing it.
Task 4

- Read this article about electric scooters and then read the statements (23-30) following it.
- Your task is to decide if the statements are true or not.
- Mark a statement A if it is true according to the article.
- Mark it B if it is false according to the article.
- Mark it C if there is not enough information in the text to decide if the sentence is true or not.
- An example (0) has been given for you.
- A = TRUE B = FALSE C = THE TEXT DOES NOT SAY

WATCH OUT… A SCOOTER!

If you’re spending time in Paris and decide to check out one of the 20,000 electric scooters buzzing along its boulevards, you might want to think about how you ride and where you end up parking.

Over the past year the city has become awash with the zippy two-wheelers, with 12-plus start-ups offering the chance to download an app and dash across the Seine for not much more than the cost of a metro ticket. But the scooters’ popularity, and the relative lack of rules around their use, has prompted City Hall to impose overdue restrictions, with fines for driving them on the pavement or parking them in doorways, crosswalks and other busy places.

After scores of injuries, residents have been loudly complaining about the scooters, which are expected to number up to 40,000 by the end of this year.

From next month, a spot fine of 35 euros will be levied on bad parking, while those caught on the sidewalk will be hit with a 135-euro penalty. A speed limit of 20 km/h has been imposed across the capital.

Even before the legislation kicks in, police have been stepping up their efforts. More than 1,000 tickets have been issued and about 600 scooters seized, authorities said, and a new surveillance force has been set up. The scooters have been described as “anarchic”, and many people say “the law of the jungle” reigns in the city.

To regulate the number of scooters, City Hall has introduced a fee of 50 euros per scooter for the first 499 units, rising to 65 euros for companies operating more than 3,000. Despite the efforts to limit wild scooter riding, pedestrians remain skeptical. “The fines make sense, but can we enforce them and how?” asked Yuwei Yeh, a 47-year-old commercial retailer.

Karim Coulibaly, a 22-year-old employee with Lime, one of the scooter operators, said he thought the new laws would not limit the use of electric scooters, but that it was a good thing they are being moved off sidewalks and on to roads. He added that the company had introduced designated parking zones and had not seen a significant number of vehicles seized.

(reuters.com)
0) The headline suggests that scooters are dangerous.

23) Any of more than a dozen apps can get you an electric scooter.

24) Electric scooters can get you to most central locations in Paris faster than the metro.

25) The new City Hall regulations should have already been introduced some time ago.

26) The locals have spoken out against the scooters.

27) When the new rules are introduced, it will be illegal to ride an electric scooter on the pavement.

28) The 20 km/h speed limit is unrealistic in a modern metropolis.

29) People in the street seem confident that the new regulations will work.

30) Designated parking zones can easily be found in all Paris districts.

- You are going to read an article about a London pub’s offer for lonely people.
- Some words are missing from the text.
- Use the words in brackets to form the words that fit in the gaps (1-9).
- Then write the appropriate form of these words on the lines after the text.
- There might be cases when you do not have to change the word in brackets.
- Use only one word for each gap.
- There is an example (0) at the beginning.

FREE CHRISTMAS MEAL FOR LONELY PEOPLE

This will be the fourth time that The Alexandra, a pub in (0) ________ (centre), Wimbledon, has provided a free Christmas lunch to people spending the holiday by (1) ________ (they). Landlords Mick and Sarah Dore dished up 62 roasts last year and are aiming for 100 this year. But, they say, “getting people to come out of the house is (2) ________ (unbelievable) difficult.”

Loneliness (3) ________ (special) are well aware of the problem. Jill Mortimer, psychologist at Age UK, told The Independent that “some people are actually hiding, especially due to (4) ________ (ability) or grief,” and that many feel ashamed of being lonely. Weeks of (5) ________ (investigate) of “what’s stopping them from connecting” may be necessary to convince someone to come out of their shell, she said, adding that men in particular are more (6) ________ (like) to attend events if they can play an active role.

To get people (7) ________ (involve) was one of the reasons The Alexandra upgraded their previous offer of a drink at Christmas to include a meal. “Once we had a (8) ________ (widow) come in and I sat and had a couple of pints with him,” said Mr Dore. “He obviously had (9) ________ (where) to go. I said: “Why don’t you come and have dinner with us, the staff and my family?”

“He said he wouldn’t because he had somewhere else to go – and he clearly didn’t have. It was really the interaction with him that year that made me think we should offer food as well.”

PEANUT BUTTER AND JELLY PAYMENT FOR PARKING TICKETS

The University of Alaska’s Anchorage campus has (0) ________ annual tradition that serves a unique role in fighting student hunger.

The campus is taking an unusual step to help students (19) ________ need. Once a year, anyone with unpaid parking fines will be able to (20) ________ down on, or even cover, the cost of their parking tickets (21) ________ donating peanut butter and jelly. The food goes to the university’s emergency cache, a stored supply of food (22) ________ provides food to students who face hunger regularly. The drive typically runs for two weeks. This year, through a partnership with the on-campus dining facilities, the second week will focus (23) ________ collecting canned soup for the program.

Parking fees can be cancelled out by different amounts depending on the size of any donation, but (24) ________ is a limit to how far you can spread that peanut butter. Parking services limited the number of PB&J payments to two parking tickets per individual.

Two 16 oz. jars will be good for a $10 credit, three jars will cover a $35 citation, and five jars will cover a $60 ticket. Tickets must (25) ________ been issued within the past 45 days. “Any nut, butter-almond, cashew, peanut butter or any flavour jam, jelly, marmalade, preserves etc. will be accepted. All donations have to be commercially produced (no home canning), unopened and (26) ________ past their ‘best before’ date,” UAA Parking Service said on its webpage.

POETRY PHARMACY

The majority of people who’ve visited the world’s first poetry pharmacy have been looking for help to reduce down the stresses and strains of modern life. Based in Bishops Castle, it is the brainchild of poet Deborah Alma, who then prescribes poems, not pills, to her ‘patients’. Ms Alma, who is a poet herself, arranges the books in her shop according to ‘mood’ as she believes in poetry can help deal with a whole range of conditions, such as exhaustion, stress and broken hearts. She also runs to poetic consultations, inviting her ‘patients’ into a consultation room, asking from them a list of questions and then ‘prescribing’ a carefully chosen personal poem. She said: “When I give a poem to someone other it becomes theirs and they hardly own it. They stick it on their fridge and it can be enough inspiring and encouraging.” At the Poetry Pharmacy they believe getting the right poem to the right person can make a difference.

Welcome to the Listening component of the Matura Examination.
The listening material and the instructions are recorded on this CD, and the tasks and instructions are printed in your test booklet.
• There will be three tasks, and every recording will be played twice.
• The tasks will begin with some music, and then you will hear (and you can also read) the instructions to the task.
• This will be followed by a silent period on the CD in order to give you some time to look at the task in your test booklet before hearing the text.
• Then we will play the recording in one piece.
• After that, we will play the recording for the second time, but now in shorter sections and with breaks between the sections in order to give you enough time to write down your answers.

Please note that the first item in each task (marked with a tick [✓]) is always an example.
The whole test is exactly 30 minutes long.

Good luck!
In this section you will hear a linguist talk about the origins of some interesting English phrases. Your task will be to decide whether the following statements are true, false or we do not know because the text does not say, and write the appropriate letter in the boxes on the right. Write A if the statement is true, write B if the statement is false, and write C if the text does not say.

First, you will have some time to look at the task, and then we will play the whole recording in one piece.

Then you will hear the recording again, but this time we will play the text in shorter sections to give you enough time to write down your answers.

A= TRUE  B= FALSE  C= THE TEXT DOES NOT SAY

Some English phrases are rather difficult to understand.

1. In the 19th century, some Englishmen used French swear words in their conversations.

2. The relationship between France and England has always been harmonious.

3. Certain bars in America used to offer a free drink to people who ate lunch there.

4. Some dishonest bartenders secretly added extra salt to the food in these saloons.

5. The phrase “mind your Ps and Qs” can refer to the use of swear words.

6. A pint is twice as much as a quart.

7. In medieval times, only the very rich used spoons.

8. Giving silver spoons to babies as a gift is an international tradition.

That is the end of TASK 1.

8 pont
TASK 2

• In this section you will hear about what some foreign visitors found interesting about Hungary.
• Your task will be to circle the letter(s) of the correct answer(s) in the boxes on the right. Please note that in this task both answers may be correct. However, there is always at least one correct answer. This means you might have to circle one or two letters.
• First, you will have some time to look at the task, and then we will play the whole recording in one piece.
• Then you will hear the recording again, but this time we will play the text in shorter sections to give you enough time to write down your answers.

TASK 3

• In this section, you will hear about the rather strict laws and fines Venice has recently introduced.
• Your task will be to write one word in each of the gaps below using the exact words you hear in the recording.
• First, you will have some time to look at the task, and then we will play the whole recording in one piece.
• Then you will hear the recording again, but this time we will play the text in shorter sections to give you enough time to write down your answers.

Task 1

You are preparing for a holiday in Scotland and you have found the following interesting advertisement:

A fascinating way to spend holidays – The Open Book is a cozy apartment with a bookshop downstairs where you can help out during your stay.

Wigtown is a beautiful little town in Scotland, full of friendly people and with a bookshop where you will have a chance to help out during your stay in the apartment upstairs.

You can rent The Open Book on Airbnb; the minimum stay is six nights. You’ll have your own two-person apartment upstairs with the bookshop on the ground floor. It is the centre of local social life: a place for the regular meetings of the Knitting Society and the Crime and Mystery Club, board game and music afternoons and the kids’ library at the weekend. Local people just pop in all the time, for tea and biscuits and a chat.

You will help out in the bookshop 3 hours a day. Which part of day is your choice, and you are also warmly welcome to take part in any of the social events. Obviously, you’ll be given advice and assistance by a team of The Wigtown Festival volunteers, who will make sure you’ll become part of the community and feel nothing except happiness.

Interested? Email Richard: rbennett.openbook@uk

(https://ebookfriendly.com/wigtown-apartment)

Write an email of 120-150 words to Richard in which you

- tell him why you are interested and how long you plan to stay and ask about the price,
- ask him about your responsibilities in the bookshop and the type of help you will get,
- tell him which social event(s) you find most interesting and ask for more details.

Task 2

You have found the following post on the internet forum Q&A:

Laura D
Hello guys, I need your help: I’m 17 and in my last year at school. I live with my parents, but as my dad works on a ship and doesn’t come home for months, it’s my mum most of the time. She is extremely supportive and generous in many ways (art classes, gym membership, expensive clothes, etc), but she can’t control her emotions and regularly loses her temper for no reason at all. A single wrongly interpreted tone will make her yell at me furiously, no matter where we are and who else can hear.

The other day she stormed into my room when my two best friends were there and made a scene because she couldn’t find her purse and assumed I had taken it. It was extremely embarrassing! However, the worst is when she also belittles me by criticizing me for practically everything: my hairstyle, the way I use my phone, even the way I help her around the house. She may not mean to hurt me, but it does hurt, a lot.

I love my mum, I do, but I feel I can’t put up with her behaviour any longer. I’m even considering leaving home. Luckily my 20-year-old sister lives in digs and I hope she would let me stay with her. On the other hand, it would be a very drastic step driving my mum, who I know loves me in spite of everything, to despair and would probably split the family.

I can’t decide what to do. Any ideas?

Write a comment of 200-250 words in which you give your ideas
• what you think of criticizing each other in the family,
• what you think of Laura’s mother’s behaviour,
• what you think Laura should do,
• whether you have heard of a similar situation and what the solution was.

Begin your comment like this:
